The Hanford Lampoon

The lead in the water!

There's a musical coming up! Normal high schools don't really consider this a big deal. At Hanford, it's life shattering. It's not a complete surprise that the Drama Kids are somehow at the top of the social ladder here (see: our abysmal sports), but it is a little jarring when you get laughed out of a room for not knowing who Rodgers and Hammerstein were. The hills are alive, with the sound of angsty 15 year olds telling you about how much work they put into acting. And they say theater's a dying art!

Whoever spray painted the rock with "rememer" instead of remember, you lost a shoe at the scene of the crime

Winter Sports Update!

- Hanford Boys Basketball— Finally, a return to tradition! Our football season was too far of a departure from the not-so-illustrious history of Hanford Athletics. There's something comfortable about basketball this year, like watching a burning house but knowing it's not yours. Last in our conference, first in our hearts.
- Hanford Girls Basketball— Varsity is 2nd to last in the league, JV is just 2nd. Not exactly the double-double we were looking for.
- Wrestling—
- Bowling— The best team at Hanford, and still not cocky? Bowlers need more energy and verve (trash talk opponents). All I know is that if a brawl broke-out I'd be more likely to see a match.
- Swim— We're good at this! Unfortunately for swim, there is NOTHING ON EARTH that could make someone want to watch it.

The Lampoon Gets Radical

Did you know that our ASB as a collective spent over a million dollars last year? Did you know that one million divided by 2000 is 500? Can you see where this takes us? If there's any sensible economic policy it is certainly a School Pride Dividend that involves an even distribution of resources! Would you rather have prom or a pair of Balenciagas? Some sporting events or a Louis Vuitton bag? Now that you see the infallible logic of such a plan, please support the only candidate backed by the Lampoon this election season, Chairman Mao!

The Coronavirus: What You Need to know during this health CRISIS!

First off, it is extremely important to understand the magnitude of this illness. It has already infected over 7,000 people. According to Lampoon predictions, this number should rise to almost 4 billion by the time you finish reading this. It is absolutely imperative that you use this random one off sickness to justify your xenophobia—you must make your stupidity known. This is a dangerous and very serious infection that has killed almost 0.0000002827% of the population, an astronomically high 217 real people. That's only 23 thousand times less fatalities than smoking(per year)! AAAAAAAAAAAAAA We're all going to die! Be alarmist! Be a fearmonger! Whatever you can do to spread the word!
